

Before the Indiana no call law passage, the wife and I knew no peace. We could not eat our meals without interruptions. The phone aroused us from our beds after retiring for the evening. The people from the West coast seem unable to compute the differences that the time zones make. With the advent of the 'no call law', finally the wife and I were able to enjoy a degree of peace. Please, do not deny us OUR Right to not be called when we do not WANT to be called. Thank you for hearing me out and for giving this issue some very serious consideration.
